

Appropriate workplace behaviour eLearning course

Overview

The Australian Human Rights Commission has a range of eLearning courses available to organisations and businesses. These accessible and engaging courses provide participants with self-paced learning on human rights-related topics.

The Commission's Appropriate workplace behaviour eLearning course aims to enhance participants' general understanding of appropriate and inappropriate workplace behaviour. Participants gain a deeper awareness of inappropriate behaviours such as discrimination, bullying and harassment and learn some strategies for being an effective bystander.

This self-paced eLearning course takes 2-3 hours to complete.

Key learning outcomes

- Increased knowledge and understanding of discrimination, bullying and harassment
- Increased understanding of the relevant legal frameworks
- Increased awareness of the impact discrimination, bullying and harassment may have on individuals and the workplace
- Increased ability to respond to discrimination, bullying and harassment in the workplace.

What's included

- Invitation and registration services (if required)
- Certificates of completion

The course is hosted on the Australian Human Rights Commission's Learning Management System (LMS).

Cost

$59 + GST per person
Minimum 10 people.

Contact us

to discuss your organisation's training needs or to obtain a quote. Email training@humanrights.gov.au.